

The sender gathers the path characteristics and schedules the packets accordingly.

The receiver correctly reorders the media packet and hands them over to the application for decoding. It also reports the observed path characteristics.